Current Collaborative Learning Communities

Updated: April 8, 2019

The list below constitutes the current virtual learning communities (LCs) on the ACA’s Cureo platform. Available communities evolve and expand based upon ACA faculty interests. If you are not currently enrolled, we encourage you to join through our ACA website.

The LCs are constructed around broad disciplinary areas (based upon current enrollments). In addition, these groups are divided around three general focus areas:

- Teaching: These LCs are designed to furnish a platform for conversations and collaborations around issues of pedagogy and student mentoring, e.g., classroom techniques and management; student advising; course assignments and evaluation; etc...
- Scholarship: These LC’s are intended to explore and share perspectives/inquiries related (among other possibilities) to research, to curriculum development, to grant development, and to the study of one’s fields of interest/expertise.
- Administration: These LCs are designed for faculty who are serving in academic administrator roles as school or department chairs, as division heads/deans, as program coordinators, as program directors, or as other similar positions.
